PROJECTS

TwentyWon   live | github

Clone of an e-commerce furniture website using React / Redux, HTML, SCSS, Java-Script (ES6), Rails, Ruby, S3)

- Took advantage of AWS S3 for scalable, easy, and reliable media storage, using that to host images so that the website can call and seed the images as needed in the React Components.
- Integrated the Redux cycle with AJAX calls to AWS S3 to populate the interface with images, combined with React DOM manipulation and SASS to render modals.
- Utilized Google Analytics giving the ability the website to track page views, clicks, and session duration of all users.

GameDart   live | github

A team project which recommends new video games, built using MERN (MongoDB, Express.js, React/Redux, Node.js), CSS3, HTML

- Constructed through MongoDb and NodeJs the functionality and user experience, so the website can store all the data from the User, such as their list of played games, backlog list, and recommended games and for the user to have the ability to update the games' list.
- Developed and coordinated the backend and frontend routing for API calls using ExpressJS to communicate with the Giant Bomb API
- Collaborated with 3 other developers utilizing Agile and git workflow.
- Facilitated and worked in collaboration with the Front End Developer to implement best practices and make the website responsive by taking advantage of CSS.

Car-nodes   live | github

Data visualization of cars, car makers, and countries using JS, HTML, CSS, D3)

- Leveraged D3, CSS, and vanilla JS to render a one-page rerendering of the website on a click action.
- Implemented D3.visualization to render the nodes with link animation to connect each parent to the child node.
- Utilized Javascript to build and fetch the information used for the D3 tree.  Why or what information did you need from the D3 tree?
